THAT EGG IS MINE!

WRITTEN BY ANKE KRANENDONK ILLUSTRATED BY ANNETTE FIENIEG

A classic storybook about a chicken and an egg

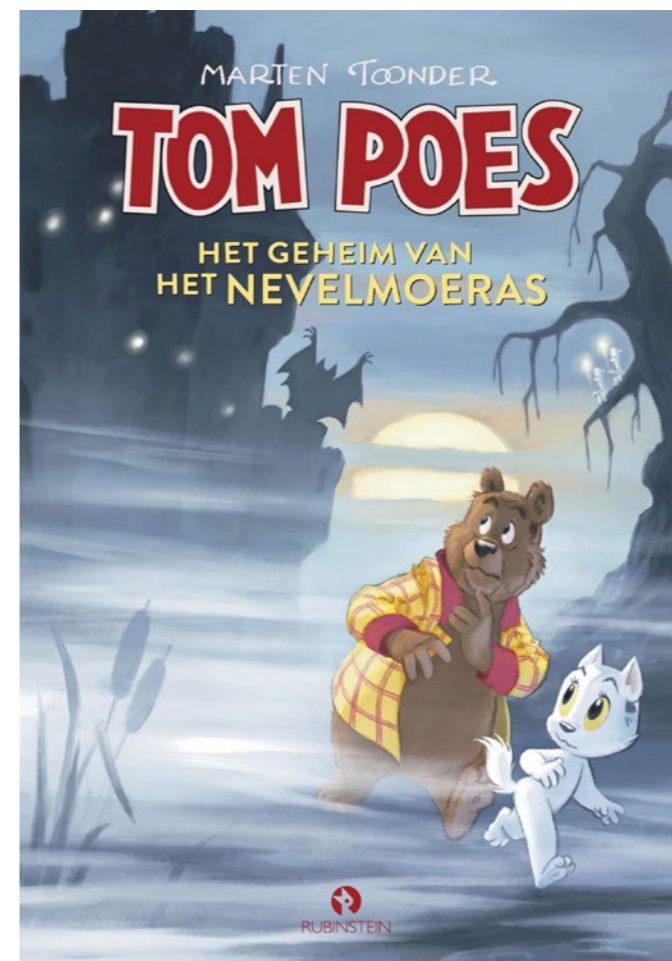

Chicken goes out every day. On her walk she gets a handful of grain from Germaine, a bath in the dust at August's and a sip from the pond from Edmond. One day, Chicken lays an egg.

'That's mine,' says Germaine.

'No, it's mine,' says August.

'No, it's mine!' says Edmond.

And what does Chicken think? She has completely different plans for the egg!

MARTEN TOONDER (1912-2005) was one of The Netherlands' most respected authors. In 1941, he published his first daily comic strip, which would become the longest running series by the same author. The characters of Tom Puss and Lord Bumble have appeared in comics, plays, a feature film and in a variety of merchandise.

TOM PUSS AND THE SECRET OF THE SWAMP

BASED ON A STORY BY MARTEN TOONDER ILLUSTRATED BY HENRIEKE GOORHUIS

A delightful chapter book full of magic and mystery

Lord Bumble and his friend Tom Puss take a fishing trip to the sunny south at the Silver Lake. However, upon arrival, something appears to be wrong... The little village is deserted and the crystal clear lake has turned into a misty and gloomy swamp.

They embark on a journey through the swamp, where they encounter the strangest things, from talking frogs to magical trolls. Then they find a dark castle among the gloomy mists. Could that be where they'll discover the secret of the Mist Swamp...?

The characters of Lord Bumble and Tom Puss have delighted generations of readers. This is a brand new chapter book for intermediate readers of 8 years and up.

Wat is de schelpentop 3 op het strand?

De schelpen op ons strand zijn de skeletten van gestorven schaaldieren. Anders dan mensen, dragen schaaldieren hun skelet aan de buitenkant, zoals een ridder een harnas draagt. Sommige schaaldieren sterven van natuurlijke dood, anderen worden vermoord...

Waarom de drie schelpentops? Omdat er drie soorten zijn die vaak op het strand te vinden zijn. De eerste is de halvekransschelp, de tweede de Amerikaanse zwaardschalen en de derde de nonnetjes.

Hoe werken de windmolens op zee?

Aan zee is er vaak meer wind dan in het binnenland. Dat komt omdat de wind er vrijer kan waaien, want er zijn geen bergen of bossen die de wind tegenhouden. En er is ook meer water, wat betekent dat de wind er meer energie kan krijgen.

De windmolens op zee zijn heel groot en staan op een platform in de zee. Ze hebben drie grote wieken die de wind opvangen. De wieken zijn verbonden met een rotor die rond kan draaien. De rotor is verbonden met een generator die elektriciteit produceert.

THE GIRL WITH THE BLUE STONE

WRITTEN BY MARANKE RINCK ILLUSTRATED BY MARTIJN VAN DER LINDEN

An imaginative take on Johannes Vermeer's iconic work

A girl hurries through the streets of Delft. She is carrying several packages that she needs to deliver to different addresses. Letters, a guitar string... and a piece of blue stone. Lapis Lazuli it's called. It's for the master painter Johannes Vermeer. He will use it to make a very special kind of blue paint: ultramarine. It's incredibly expensive, worth more than gold. The girl hesitates. Her brothers and sisters are hungry. What if she sells the little piece of stone...? But when she arrives at Vermeer's house, he has a very special request for her.

WHERE IS KITTY CAT?

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY MARIJKE KLOMPMAKER

Do you know what's hiding behind the neighbours' front doors?

Kitty Cat is missing! Her owner is of course very worried and starts looking right away. She goes down the street to ask if the neighbours have seen Kitty Cat. Very ordinary, you might think. But the houses in the street where they live are anything but ordinary... and neither are the neighbours! An amazing, colourful and imaginative book of look and find with hours of fun guaranteed.

A funny and original take on picture books

Why are there so many books about bears? Well... they are just the ideal animal for a book. A snake won't fit onto the page. Far too long. An elephant won't fit either. Far too big. A giraffe then? Right. Too tall. Really, if you think about it - bears are the perfect animal for a book.

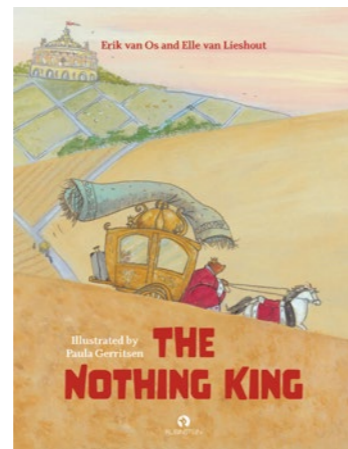

A sweet story about being true to yourself

Bear's birthday is coming up. He's not looking forward to his party with his family: the aunt who gives sloppy kisses, the uncle with the strong handshake, the cousins who wolf down the cake. But what if this year... he could celebrate it just the way he likes?

A relatable bedtime story

Tonight, when the moon is out, Mummy and Daddy bear will go to a party. Then the sitter will come. He will put Bibob Bear to bed. It takes a lot of preparation. Will the sitter be able to manage? Bibob Bear doesn't think so.

A picture book about the joy of choosing peace and quiet

A king decides to leave his palace, sell his carriage and leave the ruling to his prime minister. He moves into a little flat with his pet rabbit and houseplant to live a quiet life. His subjects and the queen don't know what to make of his behaviour - but is it really such a strange thing to do?

88 THE VINCENT VAN GOGH ATLAS

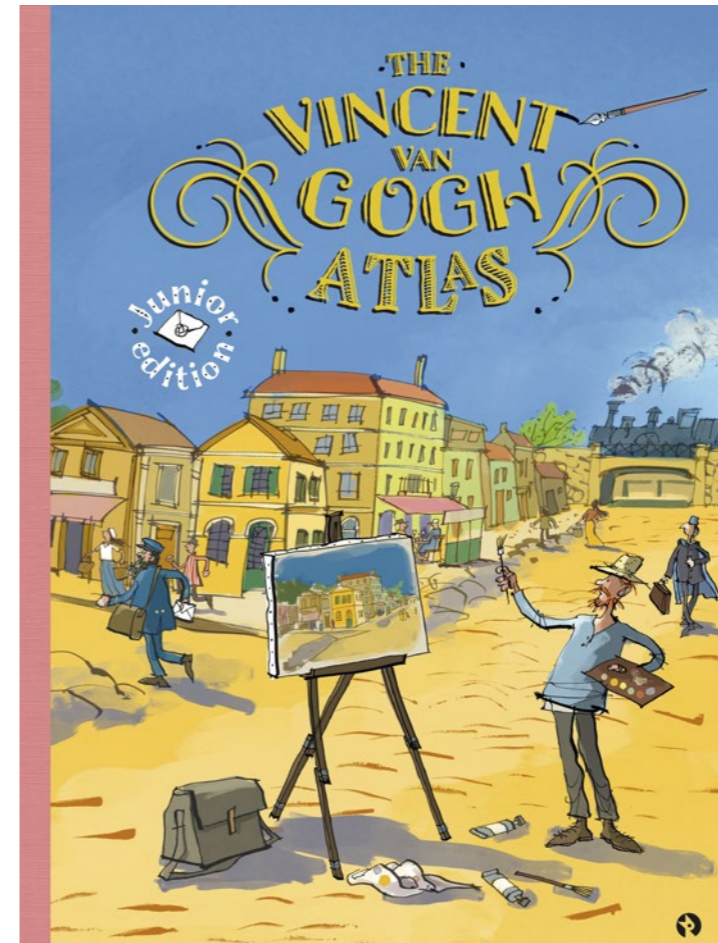

PARIS
1886-1888

Boulevard Montmartre in Paris.

In Paris
Vincent arrived in Paris early in the morning. He had a note delivered to Theo, saying that they should meet in the Louvre Museum at twelve. We do not know if they actually met there, though. Vincent then shared a house with Theo for about two years. For a while, they had no need to write each other letters. That is unfortunate for us, as Vincent's work changed dramatically during his time in Paris. It would be interesting to find out more about what Vincent was doing at the time, what he talked to Theo about, and which famous artists he met.

The note that Vincent sent to Theo, torn out of his sketchbook.

WRITTEN BY NIENKE DENEKAMP AND RENÉ VAN BLERK ILLUSTRATED BY GEERT GRATAMA

A fascinating journey through Europe with Vincent van Gogh

You've probably seen a few paintings by the most famous Dutch painter ever: Vincent van Gogh. He travelled all over Europe, by boat, on foot or by coach, but mostly by train. He kept in touch with his family by writing lots of letters. In this book, we follow Vincent to the places where he lived and worked. You'll see the world looked very different back then. The atlas shows how Vincent took inspiration from the world around him for hundreds of drawings and paintings.

Join Vincent on his journey through Europe, past all the places where he lived... and where he became the artist he wanted to be more than anything.
